1. The collective in the village of Strbovo was called "Pobeda". The chairman of the collective was Kole Spirovski and the secretary of the Party committee of the collective was Nikola Djordjiev Spirov. In 1950 the members of the collective received 30 dinars in cash and 36 dinars in goods for each working day.
2. Preparations for the inauguration of the "group system" of operating the collective began in August 1951. All land which was to be cultivated was to be divided and given to a working group, each group consisting of 15 to 20 workers. The workers would be paid in cash after they had finished their work. All production would belong to the collective, and the worker would have to buy his supplies from the free market with cash.
